NEIL BLACK

PERFORMANCE DIRECTOR

We've arrived in 2017, and what a year we have ahead of us. Global athletics will be returning to the United Kingdom for the first time since London 2012 in the form of the World Para Athletics Championships and IAAF World Championships London 2017. It is the first time one city has held both championships in the same year which is an exciting prospect.

For many athletes, the idea of competing on home soil alone will serve as all the motivation needed, and we are confident that each of the 118 athletes selected for the 2016/17 World Class Performance Programme (WCPP) will give this year their all, be it to retain a title, make the podium or produce a performance that will drive them on to success on the world stage in later years.

It is also true that London 2012 inspired a number of young athletes to progress, a number of whom are now on the WCPP. This shows that the huge impact of having a global championships on your doorstep and we look forward, in future years, to meeting those aspiring athletes who may not as yet be on the WCPP but are currently working their way up, whether it be through youth development leagues, club and or age group competition.

The last twelve months have shown us once again that not only do we have world-class athletes who are able to deliver on the highest of stages, but we also have an abundance of athletes on the WCPP programme who are capable of producing something special, with 2016 serving as another highly successful year for British athletics.

At last year's IPC Athletics European Championships, our 49-strong team won a record breaking 56 medals on the European stage, with the competition serving to highlight the strong position our Paralympic programme was in heading into Rio. July's European Championships in Amsterdam saw much of the same, with 16 medals won and many team debutants impressing.

Then it was onto Rio for a memorable summer in South America, beginning with the Olympic Games. Each of the seven medals won by the team were memorable, with the trio of Jessica Ennis-Hill, Mo Farah and Greg Rutherford all successful once again, as well as the unforgettable bronze won by Sophie Hitchon with her final throw in the hammer, our first ever female medallist in the event.

The Paralympic Games were up next, and the team won an outstanding 15 gold medals and 33 in total to exceed the amount won at London's game-changing Paralympic Games back in 2012. Richard Whitehead, Jonnie Peacock and Hannah Cockroft all retained titles they won four years previously, with the next generation of athletes such as Kare Adenegan, Maria Lyle and Sabrina Fortune all achieving their place on the podium at that level for the first time.

With London's 'Summer of World Athletics' now creeping up quickly, it's easy to forget that we have an equally busy indoor season beforehand, with a number of athletes setting their sights on the European Indoor Championships in Belgrade, Serbia at the beginning of March. The tail-end of March also offers a window of opportunity to some of our endurance athletes, with the biennial IAAF World Cross Country Championships taking place in Kampala, Uganda.

I have no doubts that in 12 months' time we'll be eagerly looking towards the next set of events following a memorable summer in London and all the amazing memories of a home championships.

Finally, I'd like to extend my thanks to the National Lottery and UK Sport for their unwavering and consistent support. With their help, we are able to offer our athletes the very best standards of support as they grow and mature within our sport.

LOOKING AHEAD TO 2017

2017 is another bumper year in the athletics calendar, as global athletics returns to the UK for the first time since London 2012 in the shape of the World Para Athletics Championships and IAAF World Championships London 2017.

A busy indoor season kicks off with the British Athletics Indoor Team Trials, held in Sheffield, and a week later, the world-class Müller Indoor Grand Prix Birmingham. The former will see the country's finest athletes go head-to-head in a bid to be crowned British champion, with the competition also offering the opportunity to win a place on the British Athletics team for March's European Indoor Championships in Belgrade, Serbia.

At the back end of March, Uganda will play host to the biennial IAAF World Cross Country Championships, with April seeing the IAAF World Relays and the London Marathon (incorporating the IAAF World Championships trials, IPC Athletics World Cup and British Championships) held on the same weekend.

In May, the endurance action continues with the IAAF World Championships 10,000m trials held at the Highgate Harriers Night of 10,000m PBs. The European Athletics Team Championships make a return in June, with the month seen out and July brought in with a bumper British Championships (30 June – 2 July), a competition which doubles as the trials ahead of August's IAAF World Championships.

A colossal July begins with the IAAF Diamond League returning to the UK in the shape of the Müller Anniversary Games, before the World Para Athletics Championships takes centre stage on 14 July, with global superstars from the world of para-athletics gracing the London Stadium over a period of ten days.

Both the European Athletics U23 and U20 Championships are also held while the World Para Athletics Championships are underway, offering the opportunity for Britain's best age-group athletes to test themselves against the best on the continent.

In August, it's the turn of the IAAF World Championships (4-13), cementing London as the first city to stage both major championships in the same city and in the same year, with it expected that around 3,300 athletes will compete over the course of both championships.

There will be one final instalment of world class athletics following the championships as the IAAF Diamond League heads to the Birmingham one week later.

The year rounds out with the European Cross Country Championships in Samorin, Slovakia, where the British team will hope to continue their strong tradition at the event.

EXPLANATION TO BIOGRAPHIES

The following biographies are of athletes supported by the World Class Performance Programme (WCPP) for 2016/17.

The 2017 Media Guide has been categorised into subsections following the levels of WCPP funding across both Olympic and Paralympic programmes; Podium, Podium Potential and Relay.

The agents listed are commercial agents as this is a media publication. For race agents please contact British Athletics.

In addition to the 2017 Media Guide, British Athletics will provide a Media Guide Insert to accompany each major championship throughout 2016 to include both WCPP and non-WCPP athletes that have been selected for either British Athletics teams. This will also be available in either print and online.

Biographical statistics such as personal bests and championship records are correct as of 20 January 2017.

NATIONAL PERFORMANCE INSTITUTE

The British Athletics Performance System is led from within the National Performance Institute in Loughborough. The National Performance Institute is the central hub where British Athletics world leading coaches and performance support personnel are based.

At the extensive athletics training facilities and from within the wider Loughborough University elite training centre environment, athletes can engage with all the varied services required by World Class Performance Plan Athletes.

For priority athletes based around the UK and overseas, the performance team at the National Performance Institute coordinate delivery of individuals' programme needs.

Future provision to be led from the National Performance Institute will include High Performance Coach Education and Development, and Talent Identification Programmes.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

Since National Lottery funding of elite sport began in 1997, following Team GB's return of a solitary gold medal at the Atlanta Olympics a year earlier, over 800 Olympic and Paralympic medals have now been won by British athletes across many different sports. National Lottery players continue to be the biggest contributors to elite sport backing over 1,100 athletes on the journey to PyeongChang 2018 and Tokyo 2020, giving them access to the best coaches, facilities and support services in the world as they prepare for major championships.

The media have done a brilliant job reporting this success and the National Lottery's role within that and we know the profound impact that this has on the lottery-playing public. So that sport in this country can continue to benefit from a thriving lottery-funded system we hope you can continue to highlight the huge difference that National Lottery players continue to make to our sporting fortunes.
